Read the following source and then answer the questions which follow. From Britain since 1789 by Martin Pugh, 1998 Although the revolution had been defeated by the battlefields, its legacy in the form of a domestic radical movement [was] more insidious. Indeed, the chaotic economic conditions prevailing between 1815 and 1830 gave it fresh momentum. (a) What is meant by describing the domestic radical movement as a 'legacy' of the revolution? [3] (b) Why were economic conditions between 1815 and 1830 'chaotic'? [7] (c) How serious a threat to the government were radical movements at the time 1815-30? [10] 2. Read the following source and then answer the questions which follow. From Britain since 1789 by Martin Pugh, 1998 As circumstances changed, the government gave less authority ... Parliament became a little more relaxed in its attitude towards the working classes ... The other change that lent some credence to the idea of a more liberal approach is the rise of some younger and more radical members and high office. (a) What is meant by a 'more relaxed' ... attitude towards the working classes? [3] (b) In what ways did 'younger ministers' show themselves to be 'liberal'? [7] (c) How far do the policies of the Tory governments between 1822 and 1830 justify describing them as 'liberal times'? [10] 3. Study the following source and answer the questions which follow. From a reprint of a speech by Lord Palmerston in the House of Commons, 8 March 1841 [The government] disclaimed any intention to unite the two which had united the middle classes and the aristocracy. On the contrary, it was then wanted above to increase rather than diminish that influence ... the lack of an increase of the Member for counties as the basis and most stable basis of representation ... The great merit of the Bill, in his opinion, was that it altered the distribution of political power, and reduced the constitution, by giving the middle classes in that situation to which they were entitled, and which was most likely to prove advantageous to themselves and the community. (a) What, according to the source, was Palmerston's attitude towards the proposals in the Reform Bill? [3] (b) What defects in the existing system of representation did the Reform Bill seek to rectify? [7] (c) What factors enabled the Whigs between 1830 and 1842 to overcome the opposition to reform of parliament? [10] 4. Explain the reasons for the revival of the Conservatives in the 1830s. [10] (a) Assess the success of the main domestic policies of Peel's second ministry, 1841-45. [10] 	Through questions and answer, conclude the lesson.
